

Elizabeth the Elector: What was your Campaign Like?

ELIZABETH: I sent a mailing around to the members of the state committee. And I took a picture of John Kerry and myself that I had taken in 1996 when I was a delegate to the national convention in Chicago. And it happened to be a pretty good picture of him and a pretty good picture of me and I blew it up and I made it into a card, and on the back of it it just talks about, you know, my dedication to helping campaigns, what I have done for John Kerry, why I think I would be a good elector, why I think I would be a good representative, and also it's like anything else, it's like with a job interview. Showing that you really want the position and that you are willing to work hard for it, people respect that, so I did a mailing, I made phone calls, I asked for commitments. Everybody else who won, they sent out a mailing. It might have been just a letter, in some cases it was a postcard. And then almost all of them made phone calls. They got the list of all the state committee members and just started calling.
